I. Summary:

The bill exempts the facilities of public utilities from those permits for which the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) has authority to delegate to another governmental entity.

This bill substantially amends section 337.401 of the Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

The 2002 Legislature granted FDOT the authority to enter into agreements delegating storm water drainage permitting to a governmental entity in instances where the agency determines that permit issuance is based on requirements that are at least as stringent as its own and will ensure the safety and integrity of FDOT facilities. In 2003, the Legislature amended s. 337.401, F.S., to allow FDOT to coordinate with other governmental entities, where appropriate, to delegate road-connection permitting and permitting of right-of-way use by utilities. FDOT has supported permit delegation as a way to reduce its permitting staff, as well as create time and cost-saving efficiencies for permit applicants.

The electric utilities expressed concerns with the 2002 law change, saying they are comfortable with and well-versed in FDOT's requirements and processes for utility permitting or relocation in connection with public right-of-way improvements. Included in the House and Senate Journals in the 2003 regular session were assurances that local governments could not require specifications different from those of FDOT, nor could a local government withhold a permit that otherwise would be granted by FDOT.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

Section 1 of the bill amends s. 337.401, F.S., to exempt the facilities of public utilities from those permits for which FDOT has authority to enter into agreements delegating the permitting to a governmental entity.

Section 2 provides an effective date of July 1, 2004.
